No matter where managers and supervisors are, they can create and access their business' current work schedules using WorkSchedule.Net. This work schedule maker features a handful of standout tools that include a schedule set-up wizard, email and text messaging capabilities, and several reporting options. This application can also integrate well with many business products such as time clock and payroll software. Unfortunately, WorkSchedule.Net lacks a few key features, which lowered its ranking on our lineup. WorkSchedule.Net is a hosted service, which means you do not have to install or download any software onto your computer. You can access your information from any computer with an internet connection. This makes working on the go simple and much more enjoyable for managers and supervisors who oversee various locations. However, we are disappointed that there is no mobile app for this employee scheduling software, which would make this information even more accessible.

One of the most important features that reduce the complexity of this application is the auto-scheduler. The auto-scheduler considers several factors when it makes a schedule. First, you can define what the different positions in your business are, telling the auto-scheduler what role specific employees should play in the schedule. You can also specify whether employees are full time or part time, and you can assign ranks to employees and specific departments.

Employees can set their availability from any computer with a compatible internet browser. The auto-scheduler will recognize all this and commit your employees accordingly.

If one of your employees needs a shift covered, you can solve the problem quickly and effectively with the swap function. Just post a message to your other employees, and then all an available employee needs to do is request the shift swap with the absent worker, who then accepts the swap. You can configure your system to require manager approval on all swaps, or WorkSchedule.Net can approve or deny them based on your predetermined rules. This is much easier for your workers than searching for fellow employees' cell phone numbers and calling each one to see if they can cover the shift.

The Bid Shift feature works a little differently. You can make certain shifts available for employees to bid on. This makes it possible for any employee to volunteer for the hours. Once you've received the requests, the choice is yours.

This employee schedule maker will let you know if there are any schedule conflicts as you work to create and revise shifts. This can be particularly useful if you have employees who work in more than one department. If an employee is scheduled for a shift in two departments at the same time, WorkSchedule.Net will warn you. This office scheduling software also enables you to determine exactly which shifts are available. This way, you can schedule more employees any time you need more workers to meet customer demands, anticipate busy times or see increased demand.

If you need a quick overview of your schedule for any given day, week or month, WorkSchedule.Net gives you the option to create reports quickly and easily. You can view and manipulate up to 56 days of the schedule at a time with this tool. You can set up the employee scheduling software to generate reports for who is working, time-off requests, weekly hours and several additional options. It is easy to keep track of how many hours all of your employees are working because WorkSchedule.Net keeps a running tally throughout the pay period.

API compatibility is another important part of the reporting functionality of WorkSchedule.Net. Unlike its top competitors, this software won't show you the total labor cost of each shift you schedule right in its interface. However, the options it offers to export information to payroll and timecard applications make this information easy to find. Be aware that in some states, processing payroll directly from scheduling software is illegal.

With WorkSchedule.Net, you will never have to worry about confusion or misunderstandings regarding how a certain option will affect your schedule. There are little question-mark buttons all over the interface that will guide you to the WorkSchedule.Net help document online. This in-depth document contains almost all the information you will likely need. User forums also provide additional helpful advice.

If you want to communicate directly with a WorkSchedule.Net representative, you can call or email the company. We are impressed with how quickly WorkSchedule responded to our inquiry. We sent an email asking several questions, and in less than 30 minutes, we had a detailed response with answers to all of the questions we had asked.

Summary:

WorkSchedule.Net has excellent features that make it a top web service for scheduling, but what really sets it apart is its customer support and customization options. You can use the auto-scheduler in many different ways to find a scheduling system that works for your business. WorkSchedule.Net removes many of the complicated problems inherent to schedule management. Instead, you get a fully hosted web application that makes the process easy and more effective than ever.
